

Admiral Bulletin

Our hero. Head of the British Office of Special Projects, based out of the old Eppings Bank building on High Street in London.

H Hero

Miranda

Bulletin's second in command. A woman of mysterious past. Crisp, dry and sharp, she is the brains behind the Bulletin. Also curates the many mysteries from previous adventures packed away in the bottomless Eppings vault.

H Hero

Dr. Posthaste

The Admiral Bulletin of a generation or two hence. He keeps a room at Eppings on High Street and serves as Bulletin's mentor. Posthaste has a nose for good mysteries and good scotch, and keeps a remarkably full schedule for a "retired" man.

H Hero

Mimi Songbird

The front desk girl at Eppings on High Street. Young, anxious to please, and smarter than is generally acknowledged, Mimi spends much of her time assisting Miranda, who she worships. Dislikes Lord Timothy for mysterious reasons.

H Hero

Robespierre

The jovial and fraternal Frenchman, one of Bulletin's oldest and most loyal comrades. One can, however, never fail to notice his habit of pursuing secondary objectives known only to himself—often somehow occult in nature.

HS Hero/Self-dealer

Lord Timothy

So closely Bulletin's match in duties, rank and age that it's inevitable they should loathe one another, Lord Timothy never the less will work with Bulletin when the well-being of Britain is at stake. Suggestions of a past with Miranda.

HS Hero/Self-dealer

Madame LaChance

New Orleans spiritualist given to remarkable feats of intuition—or are they messages from the spirit world? Silky and aloof, but prone to open flirtation with Bulletin—especially with Miranda in earshot.

HS Hero/Self-dealer

Princess Didi

Rebellious young heir to some forgotten micro-kingdom who's always escaping from her boarding school to tag along with the Bulletin crew, whether they like it or not.

HS Hero/Self-dealer

Tackwater

Headquartered in a forgotten office in Scotland Yard, Tackwater has men in high places, low places, and everywhere inbetween. Apt to call on Bulletin when he scents something above the usual, profitable levels of corruption.

S Self-dealer

Lily Lo

A common thief, a cunning spy, a Communist revolutionary or an opportunist—you can never tell. But you can be sure she'll obtain her own ends while you're still pondering.

S Self-dealer

Captain Sporgsmal

For "expenses" and a good word to the right person, he'll ship you, anyone, or anything anywhere in the world. Just don't check in the hold, and don't ask questions, no matter what you might hear.

S Self-dealer

Amber Gris

From her jewel shop on a lost London backstreet, she sees much and forgets nothing. Every piece has a story—but you might not want to know what it is.

S Self-dealer

Lady Dalworth

Matriarch of a once-fallen family of gentry, who'll do anything to keep her family's fortunes shored up—and has. The family crest reads "Two truths and a lie."

SV Self-dealer/Villain

Wendy Turner

The all-American girl who keeps showing up at the helm of the shadiest international schemes. Ask her and it's never her fault—but then, she was a Hollywood actress once.

SV Self-dealer/Villain

Kraek

A globetrotting killer whose brutality is matched only by his relentlessness. As deadly to his "friends" as his enemies.

SV Self-dealer/Villain

Umbrella Man

Always seems to show up by the end. Who is he? What is his true purpose? How could he do such things? And how does he always manage to escape?

V Villain